TEN - PAGE EDITION.

TUESDAY, : : APRIL 22, 1890.

NEWS AND NOTES.

There will never exist anything permanently noble and excellent in a character which is a stranger to the exercise of resolute self-denial. It is with narrow-souled people as with narrow-necked bottles: The less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring it out.

Last season in England football caused thirteen deaths, fifteen broken collar-bones, three broken backs, a broken nose, a broken ankle and a badly injured cheek.

The Duke of Palmeter, a peer of Portugal, has offered the whole of the money derived from his property during the year for the purposes of establishing coast defenses for his country.

Life is too short to be wasted in petty worries, frettings, hatreds and vexations. Let us banish all these, and think on whatsoever things are pure, and lovely, and gentle, and of good report.

A company has been organized in Chicago which, its promoters say, will build the largest plate-glass factory in the world at Ellwood, Ind., and prove an important factor in competing with foreign glass.

The largest vessel ever built in France, La Touraine, of 12,000-horse-power and more than 330 feet feet long, will be added to the fleet plying between Havre and New York this season. She was launched recently.

Ten thousand shoemakers in London have struck. Their object is to compel the masters to have their work done in factories, instead of at the houses of the workmen, and thus do away with the "sweating" system.

Reports are current that Western railways have decided to fight the Interstate law, having secured legal opinion that the prohibition of pooling and the attempt to regulate long-and-short-haul rates are unconstitutional.

However good you may be, you have faults; however dull you may be, you can find out what some of them are; and however slight they may be, you had better make some—not too painful but patient—efforts to get quit of them.

Ambition is a dangerous thing. It has been described as "a fierce and unconquerable steed that bears the rider onward in the high road of preferment, but oftentimes throws him such a fall that he rarely, if ever, recovers."

Three thousand workmen are to go to work in April building canals for irrigating the lands on either side of the Rio Grande and turning a vast strip of territory into a semi-tropical garden. The land is at present worthless. Water will transform it.

The Empress of Austria is the best housekeeper among European royalties. She employs fifty cooks—twenty-five men and twenty-five women. She pays strict attention when in Vienna to the details of her huge household and is a very clever manager.

SIR CHARLES DILKE.

His Vindication Near at Hand—His Place as the Liberal Leader.

If Sir Charles Dilke remains much longer in private life, says a London dispatch of April 2d, it will be on his own determination. These are the words which Justin McCarthy used only a few days since in conversation with an American friend just returned from England.

But will the people let him? There are English and Irish constituencies to day which would return him to the Commons on satisfactory majorities. It would not be rash to say that Dilke might go back from London if he would only consent or evince the slightest desire. There are radical constituencies which admire the man as they admire none other, right with in London, that could give him a majority that would be a strong vindication of the awful charges that have been made against him.

Surely, it may be said, the English people cannot forget the Crawford scandal that is only five years old? No, but the English people are coming to see that Dilke's word is better than that of any number of such confessed adulteresses as Mrs. Crawford. It was only a question of credence from the first, and because Mrs. Crawford described accurately Dilke's room, the hangings, furniture and fixings, the good moral jury believed all that she said. Dilke at the trial claimed that the whole thing was a conspiracy. Between whom and just how it was managed he did not know.

He resigned his seat from Chelsea in one of the saddest letters of farewell that ever came from a statesman, went with his new and trusting wife to Europe, and has bided his time. He said to Justin McCarthy on the day of what he termed his "conviction" that there was nothing to be done but to resign his seat, and he insisted upon it, much against his friend's judgment. But he spoke with hope of a day coming when he should have a full and complete vindication in the eyes and hearts of the people.

For years he has been keeping the closest watch over all parties who were mixed up in that very nasty affair, and is now drawing all the loose ends together.

I have it from a friend—a close political friend—that the suspicion which he had at the trial, but which never came to the surface, that another woman who was jealous of Mrs. Mark Pattison, to whom Dilke was engaged, was at the bottom of the whole business, was the author of some of the anonymous notes which Dilke received and was the prompter of Mrs. Crawford in her story. This latter woman openly acknowledged on the witness stand that she didn't care who knew she was an adulteress, for the only thing she wanted was to be free from her loathsome and somewhat aged husband.

The fact is that Dilke must come to the front. There is no man to take his place. Chamberlain was his rival, but he has proved a disappointment. Labouchere tries to lead the Radicals, but is never taken seriously. There must be some man in sympathy with the Radicals, Home Rulers and Gladstone Liberals in general, who can hold the elements together and stand against Balfour in the Commons.

Dilke is for home rule. He is the strongest man in the empire on the foreign question and he is broad in home policy. Gladstone has never lost faith in him, and the Parnells to a man would cheer if he took his seat to-morrow. Publishers are eager for his books, the people read them and the papers quote from them. He has conducted himself modestly and people admire him who do not believe his theory of a conspiracy, which, however, is now thoroughly accepted by the best people of London. Dilke has done nothing in his own defense and refuses to accept many social invitations which come upon him. His day of social vindication is very near at hand, and then he will take immediate rank with Gladstone and above all other English statesmen. It is probable that within three months twenty leading English Liberals will have requested Dilke to re-enter public life.

Odd Fellows Anniversary.

A joint committee of Excelsior and Harmony Lodges, I. O. O. F., have completed arrangements for a picnic to be held at Raymond grove, Manana, next Saturday the 26th inst. The Hawaiian Band will be in attendance. Lunch, tea, coffee, lemons, ice cream, etc., have been provided for. Excursion tickets are on sale with the members of the committee, at fifty cents for the round trip, children under six years of age free. The time at which the trains leave and return will be given later.

Jamaica International Exhibition.

An international exhibition will be held on the island of Jamaica in 1891, to which Americans are especially invited to send exhibits, a large space being reserved for that purpose. No charge will be made for space nor will duties be levied on exhibits unless sold in the country. The exhibition will, beyond question attract many visitors from the different Spanish-American States and this coast would doubtless make friends and customers among them if it were properly represented. Wm. Lane Booker, H. B. M. Consul-General at New York a gentleman well known in San Francisco where for many years he was Consul, is chairman of the committee for the United States. All communications relative to the exhibition should be addressed to Thomas Amor, Secretary to the Committee, Stewart Building, 280 Broadway, New York.—[S. F. Paper.]

Queen Victoria has written two books which have never been published. They are volumes of travel, and recount her impressions of various places on the continent. She has been so annoyed at the criticisms of her published works, that she has refused to have these manuscripts put into print. They will be published after her death.

HILO NEWS LETTER.

Everything is as dry as a chip, and rain is wanted again. The streets are dusty.

The new Baldwin engine has been in use at Waiakea and works splendidly.

It is hoped things will be arranged soon in Honolulu so that a full force of men will be put on the Volcano road. Now the prisoners from Honolulu are idle and getting very fat.

Rev. Mr. Gulick has changed pulpits with Rev. E. P. Baker. The first mentioned will visit Kilauea and Puna while the last mentioned will visit Haleakala and each will have a change of air as well as a change of pulpit, for a few weeks.

The barkentine Quickstep is expected in a few days from San Francisco.

The late Mrs. Rebecca Howard Hitchcock was buried from Haili church on the 11th inst. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Stephen L. Desha the pastor, from Revelations 14th chapter 13th verse: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." The sermon was interpreted by Judge Lyman. Many people attended the funeral. She was buried in Homeland cemetery, Hilo. The foreign stores closed and the flags were placed at half-mast.

Hilo, April 17. J. A. M.

From North Hilo it is learned that a part of the lands situated at Wai-punaie have been surveyed for homesteads and seventeen of them are already taken up by Hawaiians, Portuguese and others.

The North Hilo Road Board seems to be almost a thing of the past. It struggles along with one member nowadays and the heavy rains have made the roads very bad, so it would be a great benefit to have a full fledged Road Board again.

Two prisoners escaped from the Laupahoehoe jail the other day. Only one has been captured up to date.

E. W. Barnard has been reappointed as district justice for North Hilo. April 15. L.

About Coffee.

The average bulk of the genuine coffee imported into the United States is 8,000,000 bags. 180,000,000 pounds per annum. Experts estimate that fully 20 per cent of the coffee sold to consumers is bogus, which raises the consumption to 216,000,000 pounds. Taking 30 cents per pound as the average retail price, the people of America pay $25,000,000 every year for this one article of food, of which $13,000,000 is paid for roasted and ground beans, peas, rye, or a manufactured article in no way resembling the Brazilian berry. To this must be added the production and sale of what is called "coffee substitutes." There are any number of "coffee substitutes," the Hillis variety being the most successful. This company is already manufacturing 10,000 pounds per week, it being sold by the barrel
